

Abstract

A method for desmearing resin accretions from the surface of a substrate and texturing resins by generating a free radical which attacks and removes the resin accretions and textures the resin.